Plato's Cave and the Way Out

Saturday, May 8, 2021 from 2:00 – 4:00 pm

Presenters: Jonathan Colbert and Robert Moore

“What is truly good? The Greek philosopher Plato asserted that we are in the habit of thinking we know what is good when we do not know. To make his point, he compares humanity to prisoners living in an underground cave, mistaking shadows on the wall for reality. He also uses geometrical symbols to delineate the levels of perception available to us as human beings. This forum will describe and discuss Plato's use of myth and symbol to help us understand the human condition.”
